

the market of national identity is essential to the empire, but even in the periphery, national identity is always in crisis at the seaside the globalized tourists can buy dutch sabots adapted as bulgarian souvenirs, figures of the newest mythology, a panopticum of standardized taste.